new authors to introduce

A task, made easy by the fact that we have no choice, but to mention every and each of our authors in this inaugural issue:

- * Mrs. Susan Kaszas of "A Mother's Shoah" in book, downloadable and e-book as well as CD-ROM formats,
- * Mark Winston of the Decide 123! (tm) PC program, and
- * Yours truly, Steven Kingsley.

Look for a slew of introductions here, as the roster of authors (you included, we trust) expands next year.

works to mention

A literary work and two PC software programs, published and distributed by us, top our current list:

- * A Mother's Shoah, chronicling the life and survival of Mrs. Susan Kaszas during the Holocaust in 1944-45,
- * Knowledge Science, a PC hypertext program for the creation and management of knowledge, and
- * Decide 123! (tm), a very easy and inexpensive cost/benefit decision support program for PC-s.

Don't forget - we'd like to see your work cited here too!

our year 2000 editorial

The newsletter you are reading and its publisher, NewMedia Publishing are living proof of how publishing is being transformed in front of your eyes. Every medium today is in the process of becoming two complimentary information outlet: print and digital. Print's in-depth content delivery, clarity of layout and ease of use are now only part of the equation; the other parts are the immediacy and incredible interactive potential of the electronic media, as exemplified by the World Wide Web.

In fact, the word "publish", once synonymous with printed matter, does not have much meaning these days without an electronic component. Think about it: is a press release really released before it is on the Web? Is a company brochure truly available if you can't find it online? And - let's push it - is an article, report, study or manual effectively published if you can't access it from your browser?

You know the answers. Now, with a little help from resources like us, you can create and market your own works and knowledge, collaborate with others and present your ideas easily, securely and profitably.

The millennium of the creative mind has truly arrived. My wish is that you make the most of it.
